

Module 8

For module 8 I changed my file names. I wanted them to be accessible for me, and the way I think. For example, I know I won't need to look back at my reasoning as much in my modules so I created a module folder. If I ever do I will know where to go as well. Next I knew I wanted a file for navigation and sitemaps so I know where my tabs will go when creating the website and so I easily refer back to this information, so I made a navigation file. Next I wanted a wireframe file for my handwritten and digital wireframes since they will be an important aspect of my design, and I will probably want to refer back to them when coding the website. Finally I made a folder called "designcomp" which includes everything about the design comp (typographic guide, colors) as well as the design comp themselves. This is probably the most important folder because these will be the documents I refer back to most.
