Module 5

I began getting my ideas flowing by researching other's resume. I found a site of the best resume websites and went through them. I noticed every website that was considered "creative" had a extremely unique landing page. This is what I set out for in this step. I wanted to design a page that was sophisticated, simple, and creative. I also decided since photography was going to be an aspect of my paper I was going to include photography right on the landing page. The layout is going to be relatively intricate to entice viewer to look at more of the site and intrigue them. I am going to begin with a bunch of different size boxes covering the screen then I will place links in "random" (actually spaced for personal preference and what looks balanced to my eyes and will ask others for their opinion too) boxes. Then in a few boxes I will place some of my black and white photography to make the website artistic, since being artistic is part of my skills. Then I will make each box a different shade of a color, I am thinking I will do dark burgundy reds and light and dark versions. Finally I will have a footer at the bottom with my name, email, and phone number for easy contact if they are solely impressed by the landing page they have the ability to contact me immediately.

Next I decided to make the pages, that I have links to on the complex landing page, less complicated. I think that will make the website equal in complexities and simplicities so the user can get around and see the information I have posted. I am going to create a header and place that at the top and it will include some of the design from the landing page, and then underneath it I will put the navigation. I will do this because it will be completely visible and the viewer will be able to switch pages without having to look around on the website. The content will lie beneath the navigation and I will organize it to keep this simplistic look. Finally a footer on the bottom that contains my name, email, and phone number for easy contacting. This look will be on every page except for the landing page.
